

Fleet fuelling

Everyday, a whole armada of trucks sails along our roads, crossing from border to border. Day and night. These vehicles need one thing - Power. This power is provided by fuelling stations, fleet fuelling stations to be more precise. No problem that you as a fleet fuelling station owner want to offer your customers the best possible service. This means fast, cashless, blanket refuelling around the clock. A satisfied customer is a loyal customer, which in turn is gratification for you.

Yet the level of your gratification largely depends on the profitability of your systems. We can provide twofold support - help you provide a more stylish customer loyalty card and achieve a more rational and therefore cost-effective operation. We have just the right equipment at fleet fuelling stations too. Our Hecfleet is undoubtedly the auto fuel terminal for the New Millennium. It offers you every service you would expect of a modern auto fuel terminal. Its reliable technology makes it a clear winner for you.

Then there's OPTILEVEL our extremely precise and dependable filling measuring system. The two systems in combination ensure smooth and fully-automatic procedures at your fleet fuelling station. Guaranteed.

Both Hecfleet and OPTILEVEL provide you with all data relevant to your system. The products are self-managing, shall we say, just as you would expect from a high-quality fleet fuelling station. OPTILEVEL provides all information on the filling levels in the tanks and Hecfleet can be described as the great co-ordinator.

Because data polling runs during tank operation, Hecfleet keeps fuelling stations open around-the-clock. With other systems, the enormous volume of data to be transferred often dramatically increases costs. Not the case with Hecfleet. One major advantage, thanks to ISDN and other modern transfer protocols, is its extremely short transfer times. Additional features are AER (Active Error Reporting) so it can report statuses and errors and also limit processing, which eliminates drive-offs.

So you see, we have covered every key aspect of a fleet fuelling station. Hecfleet provides you with a modern, highly-reliable, cross-border solution for all your refuelling requirements.